WHAT IS FAIRTRADE

OUR MISSION

A man with a mustache, wearing a light-colored long-sleeved shirt and a green backpack, is smiling as he packs green bananas into a green box. He is wearing yellow gloves. The background shows a lush banana plantation with large green leaves and a blue plastic bag hanging from a branch.

Oxford Brookes Becomes First Fairtrade University

3 Oct 2003

Earlier this month the Fairtrade Foundation awarded Oxford Brookes the UK's first official 'Fairtrade University' status. This fantastic move, which was initiated by the local People & Planet group, follows two years of work by students and staff.

The official status means that Oxford Brookes has achieved 5 goals that will help increase the sale of Fairtrade products, including selling them in campus canteens and serving them at university events. Fairtrade products are guaranteed to provide a better deal to the farmers and workers in poor countries who grow much of the food we eat.

- For help making your university and school go Fairtrade order a free People & Planet campaign pack at: www.peopleandplanet.org/tradejustice/order.php
- REMINDER: If you haven't already, please email your MP to demand Trade Justice in the aftermath of the collapse of the Cancun world trade summit: www.peopleandplanet.org/tradejustice/

Five goals

- 1 - Passing a Fairtrade policy statement
- 2 - Getting Fairtrade products on campus
- 3 – Using Fairtrade Products at meetings
- 4 – Organising Fairtrade Campaigns
- 5 – Set up a Fairtrade Steering Group

How it works

- Two year review period
- Free to get, but unsupported
- 113 / 170 TEIs have the standard, making it the most popular environmental standard in the sector?
- For 13-20 year olds, 98% had a awareness of the Mark, over 60% said they would take action for Fairtrade.
- Lots more demand, and more FT purchased on campuses
- Some evidence of embedding into the curriculum

Curriculum

Bournemouth University is committed to incorporating Fairtrade into the curriculum, and is an excellent example to other universities and colleges. The School of Tourism and particularly Bournemouth's Business School have led the way. A number of modules now cover Fairtrade, and related topics, including globalisation and sustainable consumption. Some units go even further to explore in-depth the banana trade and coffee.

Incorporating Fairtrade into the curriculum is a fantastic way to get students and staff discussing and debating the issues surrounding the global trading system today, and how Fairtrade aims to overcome this.

Early thoughts on a new NUS Fairtrade University and College Standard

- Full reset
- More challenging
- Retain partnership approach
- Supported
- Local student auditors, possibly course credit?
- Audit every two years
- Small fee, differentiated FE and HE
- Aim: Educational; responsible consumerism; a catalyst for so much more
- Pilot 2017/18

Round 1: Existing scheme

- What is the value?
- What do you like?
- What don't you like?

Round 2: New scheme criteria

- What should the criteria be, to reinstate challenge?

Round 3: Support and accreditation

- What do you need help with on this? What support should we offer?
- Score gradation, or, different levels of awards?
- Trained student auditors?

Whole-institution reach of criteria

- Insights: awareness, volumes
- Partnership approach
- Leadership, commitment, policy
- Procurement and commercial teams:
 - Actual procurement, clothing
 - Advocacy: Foodservice, purchasing consortiums
 - Supply chain engagement?
- Consumer engagement, promotion, publicity
- SU / student-led activity
- Teaching / learning
- Research / coursework
- Outreach and influence

2017/18 pilot year

- 4 HEIs, 4 FEIs?
- A diversity of pilot institutions
- Start early summer 2017
- Co-creation
- Commitment to invest time and a bit of budget
